Note South's jump to three spades. After an original pass denied opening strength, his invitational jump was a good choice. And with prime values for his takeout double, North pushed on to game. After West led his club king, he switched to the heart queen. South won dummy's heart king and concluded he would score 10 easy tricks if trumps were 2-2; if West had a singleton honor, or if diamonds were 3-3, an almost 75 percent chance. He cashed dummy's trump ace and led another trump and his game hopes were over. West drew dummy's last trump, derailing South's game when diamonds split 4-2, sending South with a losing diamond. To make his game, South must use more care in his trump suit. At trick three, he should lead a low trump from dummy instead of cashing dummy's ace. West wins to lead another heart to South's ace (a trump continuation won't matter), and South counters by cashing dummy's trump ace. Leaving West's high trump at large, South plays his diamonds. If West ruffs an honor, it won't matter — a trump remains in dummy to ruff South's last diamond. West wins only two trump winners and a club, giving South 10 tricks and a vulnerable game.
